

Precision represents the proportion of the models' predictions of cancer where cancer is actually present. Recall represents the proportion of all cases of cancer that the model accurately predicted. As explained from the definitions, it is clear that both will play a vital role in the representation, analysis, and statistics of data of fatal cancer.